SILVER CERTIFICATES.

A correspondent writes; "I should like to sak if you are not misleading in your statement that 'the geverament was forced to redeem the silver certificates in gold.! Does not the Sherman law say they shall be redescred in gold or silver coin at the option of the secretary of the treasury? Where does the force come in? The Sherman law should be repealed, to it is no wonder that when the Aumsmake way for free colleage, undoubted- villians visit neighboring towns that While the law is as above quoted the practical operation of the Sherman law was to drain the treasury of gold. The large transactions at the public tressury are not made in silver. They are made in paper and gold, and on a gold basis. While the government paid out on : gold basis its revenues were coming in on a silver basis, in silver dollars and silver certificates. So the government was put in the hole and silver was not put in circulation. It was an expen sive round about method of buying bullion and contracting the volume of gold without increasing the volume of silver money. It worked well enough for a while under Harrison, but did not solve the problem. It was no substitutfor free coinage, yet imperilled the gold standard and threatened to send gold to a premium.

Under the Democratic a Immistration trade became stagnated, factories closed, the balance of trade went against the country and, as the treasury had constantly the worst end of the bargain under the silver purchase law, the bur den became too great to be carried without danger of a complete collapse. The collapse has been averted by stopping the biggest leak, the paying out of gold to get onto a silver basis. From a business standpoint the national treasury is in a better fix as soon as that act be comes a law. It can recover itself. It can restore its reserve fund and maintain its credit before the world. It can borrow and do business with the ex changes of the world if it has any to dewithout the disadvantage of being compelled by law to cripple its resources with constant useless purchases of silver. The national treasury will be pealed remains to be seen. No one pretends that this is a final solution of mer." the floancial problem. That is still be fore us. But that solution is simplified and now becomes possible. It is undoubtedly along the line of free coinage of gold and silver, the government retaining sufficient seigniorage to pay expenses of coinage, and issuing sufficient paper money on a coin basis directly to the people for the necessities of commercial transactions.

A GREEN GOVERNMENT.

A Salem man asked the price of green tomatoes at one of the stores. The merchant said 60 cents per bushel. That is rather high, said the man. Un der the present administration, he said, money was so scarce that it seemed a high price for green tomatoes.

But this administration is green like the tomatoes and besides it is in a h-li of a fix." This was rather more forcible than elegant, but is so far the best description of our government that can be given. The old grocery man was right. It is a green tomato administration. It will never ripen into any good fruit. It makes a man's mouth pucker to taste of it. The people don't like it.

FAKE ADVERTISING.

The city is flooded and will be until after the holidays with fake advertising schemes. They are solicited in the name of charity, religion and education, all sorts of deadbeat enterprises, ing over is radically wrong, as a man rest up advertising cards and business losce so much vitality in the delayed get up advertising cards and business men are muleted for 50 cts., $1, $2, $5. $10, or the solicitors beg trade, or ex change of services, or even old clothes, The tramp begging for food is not a more formidable object of terror than these canvassers for ads. Of course, there is no business about these enterprises except to get shekels into the pocket of the schemer. It has several bad effects. The art and business of legitimate advertising is discredited, because the people who pay their dollars expecting returns are disappointed. The legitimate field of advertising suffers in the daily and weekly newspaper, Institutions that are maintained at great expense for dispatches and to encourage all enterprises and promote the welfare of the city. The third evil effect of they gull continually figure in the newspapers at their expense. The newspapers are the greatest sufferers from fake advertising.

The plagrim, whose respectability is vouched for, we are told, by an Egyp tian sheik who is greatly respected in Cairo, declares that on returning from Mecca, the "rafilat," or detachment of the caravan to which he belonged, and which was composed of about 700 camels, left Bir-Said at daybreak and halted at sunset at the foot of a mountain, on the road to Yamboo.

A few minutes after arriving there the rafilat, composed of men, women and children, found themselves attacked by Bedouins of the desert, who attacked them with the utmost savagery, slaying and maining the men of the party. The hot, dry sand was wet with blood. Some of the women, after being robbed of their clothes and valuables, were left to their fate. The younger and better looking ones were carried off as slaves. With great difficulty the narrator of these facts escaped with his life,

One Woman Has Her Say.

The lords of creation are so convinced of their competence to manage all sorts and conditions of affairs that it is often a surprise to them that their womankind resent their intervention in matters domestic. The average husband feels confident that if he but had his way the children would be well disciplined, the servants obedient, the household bills reduced by half and the whole establishment worked with clocklike regularity. If, however, he is allowed to put his theories into practice, the result is a general confusion and irritation, which lasts until the house mother again gath-A Wonderful Machine.

The reasons for the failure of masculine interference are not difficult to discover. A man's mind is quite unfitted for the ever varying minutise of house keeping. He cannot understand that the routine of an office or barracks is impossible in a family chiefly composed of women, and that the only way to secure domestic peace is not to attempt rigid discipline, but to exercise tact and forbearance, adapting general rules to par-ticular cases.—New York Commercial

The electrical force of the human body, a the nerve fluid may be termed, is an espe partment of sci exerts so marked an influence on the healt of the organs of the body. sure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system. as it supplies the heart lungs, stomach, lowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way dis-ach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by Irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Began at the Wrong End.

A cigar dealer near Quincy market has frequent occasion to joke about some of the methods of business in vogue among his patrons, who are mostly marketmen. One morning recently a customer of one of the fruit venders near by was complaining about the poor quality of a barrel of apples that had been sold to him a day or two before.

"Why." said he, "the farther I went into the barrel the poorer the apples were. The man who sold them was nonplused for a reply, but the cigar man came smiling to his rescue by remark-

'You made a mistake, sir, in opening the barrel at the wrong end. If you had begun at the other end you would have found that the fruit improved the lower you went into it." All laughed, and while the apple seller made the required concession the cigars were on the man who complained. - Boston Herald.
